Subject Focus - English

It has been a busy and exciting year in the English department so far! Students have been involved in many extra-curricular opportunities including author visits, lunchtime clubs and a wide range of competitions, we have made changes to parts of our KS3 curriculum and students have been working hard in preparation for examinations.

September saw the launch of the Young Writer's national poetry competition, in which students were tasked to write poems about themselves, guided by the topic "this is me". This was particularly effective for our (then) new Year 7 cohort, who had the opportunity to explore what makes them 'them', whilst simultaneously introducing themselves to their new peers! However, it wasn't just our Year 7s who flourished in this competition, with several entries across the school getting published in the Young Writer's 'This is me' poetry anthology. Well done on such a winning start to the year!

In November, the author Chris Bradford visited students in Years 7 and 8. Students learnt about Chris' Young Samurai and Bodyguard series and were trained in the skills of being a bodyguard. Students had an excellent day and produced some fantastic writing about their day. Students were so engrossed by the experience, not only are Chris' books in constant demand in the library, but several students have even gone out of their way to purchase their own copies of his book series.

March saw the celebrations in English continue, with World Book Day. Across the school day, students were read a section from The Man with the Yellow Face by Anthony Horowitz each lesson by their teachers. However, this was no ordinary reading, as students were then tasked with voting for the teacher who gave the best reading performance throughout the day. Miss Walsh was awarded the first prize, closely followed by Mr Pring in second place, and Ms Wilson and Ms Russell in third. It was great to see the competitive spirit kick in across the school!

As well as enjoying a whole school read for World Book Day, students were also invited to enter 2 competitions. The first was to write a 500-word story. We read some amazing short stories about warriors, islands and robots but the best story at KS3 was written by Gracie A in 7 Mandela and was about a young boy called Oli and a penguin called Skipper. At KS4 the best story was awarded to Ashton C in 11 Parks. The second competition involved students designing a book cover. The winner was Kristina L in 9 Mandela for the cover of the graphic novel The Demon Slayer by Kimetsu no Yaiba. Kristina's cover design will now replace the book cover in our school library.

At Easter, we introduced a new novel to the Year 9 curriculum: Noughts and Crosses. The novel is about two teenage friends, Sephy who is a Cross and Callum who is a Nought, who live in a world where Noughts and Crosses do not mix. The novel deals with some sensitive topics and we have been impressed by how students have responded to the text. Well done for discussing the text with such maturity. The book has proven to be popular, with the text now being in high demand in the school library. In light of student enthusiasm, we have purchased further copies and bought the rest of the novels in the series. The series is highly recommended, so you'll need to be quick to grab a copy for summer reading!

Easter also saw revision in full swing for KS4 and KS5 students. Year 10 students had their pre-public examinations - we truly commend the hard work and effort that students put into their exams.

Similarly, after two years of dedication, it was finally time for our Year 11 classes to show off their knowledge in their English GCSEs. Alongside their after-school interventions, a number of students attended targeted intervention sessions in the Easter holidays and the May half-term. We hope you found these sessions beneficial and we welcome your feedback on these. The turnout for pre-exam breakfast was spectacular each morning (whether that was because students wanted to do some last-minute revision or they wanted a breakfast of pastries, supplied by the English department!). We wish you all the best of luck for the next stages in your education, and we look forward to seeing your hard work pay off in August when you receive your exam results.

Our A-Level students also displayed a similar commitment to their studies in the lead up to their examinations. As you move on to the next stages of your lives, we wholeheartedly wish you the best for your futures, and hope that you keep in touch with where your A-Levels take you.

As we now approach the end of the academic year, we ask all English students at Ridgeway Academy to continue to display enthusiasm, enjoyment and engagement towards the subject.

Miss S Walsh
Teacher of English
